Book Description

Sometimes love is right in front of you ... Sarah Kesley is just trying to get by. After barely scraping a diploma in the pre-med program at UC Berkeley, she's left with few options for medical school. Now she's stuck in a dead end job, trying to figure out what she should do next. Love is the last thing on her mind. Ethan Pierce is a good friend. Such a good friend, in fact, that Sarah is starting to notice him in a way she hasn't before. Those late night car rides, those meetings in the park, those long, quiet talks. Suddenly Sarah is seeing Ethan in a different light. When they both go on a last-minute trip to Paris, it's obvious that things are starting to change between them. And what could be better than a new love in the city of lights? But there are people to be reckoned with at home, and one in particular could undermine their love altogether. A steamy, full-length, standalone romance with a guaranteed HEA. All of the books in the Great Escapes series can be read in any order.
